CERIA: Unity In Diversity

The earliest record of Surabaya found in a book dated in 1225, written by Chau Ju-Kua, in which it was called Jung-ya-lu, the ancient name of Surabaya. Ma Huan documented the early 15th century visit of Zheng He’s ship in his book (1433) Ying-yai Sheng-lan: “after travelling south for more than twenty li, the ship reached Sulunayi, whose foreign name is Surabaya. At the estuary, the out flowing water is fresh. It is then officially established in 1293. The date was taken from the glory of Raden Wijaya, the first king of Majapahit Kingdom, who won the battle against Chinese troops”. As Indonesia’s second largest city, Surabaya is known for its frankness and hot weather. Having the fierce struggles of independence, Surabaya is also known as “the City of Heroes”. The Battle of Surabaya in 1945 played an important role for galvanizing independence movements and gaining international support for Indonesian Independence.

Surabaya is locally believed to derive its name from the words “sura” or “suro” (shark) and “baya” or “boyo” (crocodile). In the local myth and Jayabaya prophecy (an ancient Javanese belief), a giant white shark and a giant crocodile were believed to have a fight against each other in order to gain the title “the strongest and most powerful animal” in the area. Now the two animals are used as the city’s landmark, the two facing each other while circling, as depicted in a statue appropriately located near the Surabaya zoo’s entrance.
Airlangga Summer Program 2016/2017 is open for 40 targeted international students. It offers a closed observation on creative industry in Indonesia, emphasizing on creative industry of Batik home industry and explores other creative industry, such as hand crafting of recycled goods and knitted ware industry. Furthermore, it focuses on exploring their perceived economic, cultural and traditional values, how they keep up with consumer's needs and market desire in Indonesia; and how it introduces a new culture as a part of it with online shopping and how it produces new challenges such as intellectual property rights.

It delivers you to look closely on the creative industry in a way that the unlimited human creativity utilizes the cultural and traditional value into a widely acceptable product globally; how it uses less natural resources and benefits recyclable goods, compares to the traditional manufacturing industry; and opens more employment especially for Small Medium Enterprise (SME).

This short program combines interactive classes, workshop visits/field trips to some SME’s workshops around the city of Surabaya (such as Batik workshop, leather crafts and recycle home industry) and a cultural trip.

Creative Industry in Indonesia

Creative industry plays an important role in economic growth as it only uses the unlimited resource of human creativity, it opens more employment and; in some area, it less depends on natural resource as the traditional manufacturing industry. In Indonesia, it includes advertising, architecture, art and antiques, craft, design, fashion, video film and photography, interactive games, music, performing arts, printing and publishing, computer and software, television and radio, and research and development.

It becomes the 7th major contributor to its GDP (7.2%) export value (9%). It opened more employment in 2002-2007. As the 4th largest population in the world, Indonesia poses itself as a potential large market for creative industry. Creative industry has become an important tool for Indonesia to survive during 2010-2011 global financial crisis. Moreover, in some areas, it depends on the local wisdom and traditional values among the society and turns them into widely acceptable products, such as Batik and traditional handy-crafts.

It will be quite challenging for creative industry, especially the Small Medium Enterprises (SMEs), to face the global challenge and ASEAN Economic Community, when there will be a lot of creative industry products entering Indonesia markets. Besides, the revolution in information and communication technology has brought both many opportunities and challenges. Internet has been a good opportunity for creative industry to have wider network and market. However, it brings some challenges, like the intellectual property right and cybercrime issues.

Airlangga Summer Program 2017 opens for 40 targeted international students who are interested in Indonesian traditional medicine or herbal medicine and Indonesian Language and Cultures. Both are earnable and transferrable credits; 4 credits each.

First, it emphasizes on the learning variety of herbal medicines including local and scientific names, and the uses for health. It focuses on understanding the process of Jamu medicines production, including harvesting and post-harvesting of plant-based materials, extracting and mixing methods, packaging and distributing of the medicines. It delivers you to look closely on the process of making Indonesian traditional medicine in a scientific way; observing and learning about the role of Jamu in the health care system of Indonesia. Students can understand how to make traditional medicine from natural resources product and look closely on traditional producer of Jamu.

Second, it also offers Indonesian Language and Cultures class. Students will learn about Indonesian National Language, called Bahasa Indonesia, and some Indonesian cultures; both for traditional and urban culture. Students will have a chance to learn a traditional dance, Javanese traditional instruments, called Gamelan; and also the famous traditional clothes painting, Batik. During some free times, students will be guided to play traditional games.

This short program combines some interactive classes, workshop, laboratory, field trips and also a cultural trip to the volcanic mountain of Bromo.

Indonesian traditional medicine plays an important role in supporting the health care system in Indonesia. It is popularly known as Jamu and it has been used through generations for its benefits and it costs very cheap. This program has been designed to give general and detail overview on Indonesian Traditional Medicine.

Universitas Airlangga through such efforts of the Faculty of Pharmacy is able to share the knowledge on Jamu. The course is aimed to build the base knowledge for active management of traditional, complementary medicine through appropriate policies, to make an understanding on the philosophy, and application of the medicine. Also, it aims to give the participants of the program a better understanding on the preparation of herbal materials and production of Jamu.

It will be quite challenging to enhance the performance of Jamu, especially in order to be able to use it more effectively in the primary health care systems. Nowadays, most universities and research institutions have conducted research to expand the understanding of the education and research of medicines. Some field trips will help students to understand better about the importance of good quality herbal materials as a prerequisite in serving a good quality of traditional medicine.

The topic of Indonesian traditional medicine consists of learning the basic concept of Indonesian Traditional Medicine, the herbal plants for medical purposes, and recent development of Indonesian Traditional Medicine. The studies are conducted through various methods including classes, laboratory works, and field trips.

Airlangga Summer Program 2016 opens for 5 to 20 targeted international students who are interested in Indonesian Law, Islamic Law, Adat (Customary) Law, and Indonesian Language and Cultures. They will earn 4 credits each course and 16 credits in total.

It emphasizes on the learning of Indonesian Law, including Adat (Customary) and Islamic Law, and its implementation. The learning focuses on understanding the society, including how the law works in harmony with the Islamic Law, Adat Law and National Law.

It also offers Indonesian Language and Cultures class. Students will learn about Indonesian National Language, called Bahasa Indonesia, and some Indonesian cultures; both for traditional and urban culture. Students will have a chance to learn a traditional dance; Javanese traditional instruments, called Gamelan; and also the famous traditional clothes painting, Batik. This short program combines some interactive classes, workshop, field trips and also a cultural trip to the volcanic mountain of Bromo and city tour of Surabaya.

As the largest archipelagic country in the world with more than 17,000 islands, Indonesia has a unique social characteristic which influences the character of the prevailing law. In Indonesia, there are three prevailing and applicable laws in society. Long before Islam came to Indonesia, the Indonesian society has applied Adat law (customary law). Currently, in some local communities, Adat law is still applied in their social living to resolve disputes in the community, such as family and inheritance cases. The 1945 Constitution recognises the existence of the Adat law, and courts may apply this law when the parties are subject to the Adat law.

Islam as the largest population – more than 80% – has been shaping the pattern of the applicable law in Indonesia with Islamic law. The Islamic law is applied to Islamic civil and business cases, such as family law, inheritance law and Islamic finance cases (mudarabah, mitharabah, musyarakah). The state also provides a special court for the Islamic cases, the Pengadilan Agama (Islamic Court) has jurisdiction to adjudicate cases in Islamic issues. Moreover, Indonesia also has a special province which applies Islamic law. For instance, Nangroe Aceh Darussalam has been given authority to apply Islamic Law not only in civil cases, but also in criminal cases.

Indonesia was the colony of the Netherlands East India administration; therefore, it inherits the civil law system. Indonesia recognizes legal codification both in substantive and procedural laws in its national law. In the first stage, the codification was designated to reduce legal pluralism in Indonesia. However, in reality, the legal pluralism in Indonesia remains exist. Legal pluralism becomes the unique identity for Indonesian legal system in which the three different regimes (Adat law, Islamic law and national law) can be harmonized in one Indonesian legal system.

Community Empowerment Program at Airlangga or CERIA is a community service program for undergraduate students designed to empower the society. Its uniqueness lies on the feature to empower rather than physically build their surroundings. We believe that empowering a community by inserting new knowledge into disadvantaged society will bring more benefits and sustainability, and encourage both students and society to be more creative.

Universitas Airlangga has implemented community empowerment since 1989, with some developments during its implementations so far. The main goal of the program is to empower the society with students as the facilitator (co-creator) and integration between academicians, business and government in building the society (co-financing). In addition, CERIA focuses on the involvement of foreign students to work hand in hand with the local students to improve lives in our global society.

For the students, this program aims to expose them to the real problem in society, help disadvantaged society in minimizing poverty by exploring the local potentials in some regions in East Java province, such as Surabaya, Bojonegoro, Nganjuk and Probolinggo. Furthermore, students will be able to apply their knowledge into practices as a part of integrated learning and work in a team to provide solution for the society.

Two main principles to conduct CERIA are Fun and Sustainable. We invite the students to help advance our campaign for society empowerment. We hope the participants will join to put ideas into action and action into service.

Creative Industry in Indonesia

Creative industry plays an important role in economic growth as it only uses the unlimited resource of human creativity, it opens more employment and; in some area, it less depends on natural resource as the traditional manufacturing industry. In Indonesia, it includes advertising, architecture, art and antiques, craft, design, fashion, video film and photography, interactive games, music, performing arts, printing and publishing, computer and software, television amd radio, and research and development.

It becomes the 7th major contributor to its GDP (7.2%) export value (9%). It opened more employment in 2002-2007. As the 4th largest population in the world, Indonesia poses itself as a potential large market for creative industry. Creative industry has become an important tool for Indonesia to survive during 2010-2011 global financial crisis. Moreover, in some areas, it depends on the local wisdom and traditional values among the society and turns them into widely acceptable products, such as Batik and traditional handy-crafts.

It will be quite challenging for creative industry, especially the Small Medium Enterprises (SMEs), to face the global challenge and ASEAN Economic Community, when there will be a lot of creative industry products entering Indonesian markets. Besides, the revolution in information and communication technology has brought both many opportunities and challenges. Internet has been a good opportunity for creative industry to have wider network and market. However, it brings some challenges, like the intellectual property right and cyber-crime issues.

Airlangga Summer Program 2016 opens for 5 to 20 targeted international students who are interested in Indonesian Law, Islamic Law, Adat (Customary) Law, and Indonesian Language and Cultures. They earnable and transferrable credits; 4 credits each and 16 credits in total.

It emphasizes on the learning of Indonesian Law, including Adat (Customary) and Islamic Law, and its implementation. The learning focuses on understanding the society, including how the Law works in harmony with the Islamic Law, Adat Law and National Law.

It also offers Indonesian Language and Cultures class. Students will learn about Indonesian National Language, called Bahasa Indonesia, and some Indonesian cultures; both for traditional and urban culture. Students will have a chance to learn a traditional dance; Javanese traditional instruments, called Gamelan; and also the famous traditional clothes painting, Batik. During some free times, students will be guided to play traditional games.

This short program combines some interactive classes, workshop, field trips and also a cultural trip to the volcanic mountain of Bromo and city tour of Surabaya.

As the largest archipelagic country in the world with more than 17,000 islands, Indonesia has a unique social characteristic which influences the character of the prevailing law. In Indonesia, there are three prevailing and applicable laws in society. Long before Islam came to Indonesia, the Indonesian society has applied Adat law (customary law). Currently, in some local communities, Adat law is still applied in their social living to resolve disputes in the community, such as family and inheritance cases. The 1945 Constitution recognises the existence of the Adat law, and courts may apply this law when the parties are the subject to the Adat law.

Moslem, as the largest population – more than 80% – has been shaping the pattern of the applicable law in Indonesia with Islamic law. The Islamic law is applied to Islamic civil and business cases, such as family law, inheritance law and Islamic finance cases (murabahah, mudharabah, musyarakah). The state also provides a special court for the Islamic cases, the Pengadilan Agama (Islamic Court) has jurisdiction to adjudicate cases in Islamic issues. Moreover, Indonesia also has a special province which applies Islamic law. For instance, Nangroe Aceh Darussalam has been given authority to apply Islamic Law not only in civil cases, but also in criminal cases.

Indonesia was the colony of the Netherlands East India administration; therefore, it inherits the civil law system. Indonesia recognizes legal codification both in substantive and procedural laws in its national law. In the first stage, the codification was designated to reduce legal pluralism in Indonesia. However, in reality, the legal pluralism in Indonesian remains exist. Legal pluralism becomes the unique identity for Indonesian legal system in which the three different regimes (Adat law, Islamic law and national law) can be harmonized in one Indonesian legal system.

Airlangga Summer Program 2017 opens for 40 targeted international students who are interested in Indonesian traditional medicine or herbal medicine and Indonesian Language and Cultures. Both are earnable and transferrable credits; 4 credits each.

First, it emphasizes on the learning variety of herbal medicines including local and scientific names, and the uses for health. It focuses on understanding the process of Jamu medicines production, including harvesting and post-harvesting of plant-based materials, extracting and mixing methods, packaging and distributing of the medicines. It delivers you to look closely on the process of making Indonesian traditional medicine in a scientific way; observing and learning about the role of Jamu in the health care system of Indonesia. Students can understand how to make traditional medicine from natural resources product and look closely on traditional producer of Jamu.

Second, it also offers Indonesian Language and Cultures class. Students will learn about Indonesian National Language, called Bahasa Indonesia, and some Indonesian cultures; both for traditional and urban culture. Students will have a chance to learn a traditional dance, Javanese traditional instruments, called Gamelan, and also the famous traditional clothes painting, Batik. During some free times, students will be guided to play traditional games.

This short program combines some interactive classes, workshop, laboratory, field trips and also a cultural trip to the volcanic mountain of Bromo.

Indonesian traditional medicine plays an important role in supporting the health care system in Indonesia. It is popularly known as Jamu and it has been used through generations for its benefits and it costs very cheap. This program has been designed to give general and detail overview on Indonesian Traditional Medicine.

Universitas Airlangga through such efforts of the Faculty of Pharmacy is able to share the knowledge on Jamu. The course is aimed to build the base knowledge for active management of traditional, complementary medicine through appropriate policies, to make an understanding on the philosophy, and application of the medicine. Also, it aims to give the participants of the program a better understanding on the preparation of herbal materials and production of Jamu.

It will be quite challenging to enhance the performance of Jamu, especially in order to be able to use it more effectively in the primary health care systems. Nowadays, most universities and research institutions have conducted research to expand the understanding of the education and research of medicines. Some field trips will help students to understand better about the importance of good quality herbal materials as a prerequisite in serving a good quality of traditional medicine.

Safari Program

As the biggest archipelagic country located in the equator, Indonesia is home to diverse vegetations as well as million species of land animals and marine wildlife, some of which are exotic and indigenous of Indonesia. Observation and conservation of such animals have been done years ago by government, scholars, and non-government organization through various programs. National Parks and Safari Park are established to introduce, observe and conserve the rich nature of Indonesia.

Universitas Airlangga through collaboration of the Faculty of Veterinary and Faculty of Fisheries and Marines will explore and share their knowledge in this program. The course is aimed to build the base knowledge for exotic animals, marine wildlife and the oceanography of Indonesia, followed by close observations to the studied animals and wildlife marines to deepen students’ understanding. Also, it aims to give the participants of the program a better understanding on the animals’ conservation programs in Indonesia.

The program offers complete package since participants will not only learn about the course in classes but also study the animals through close observation in the nature as well. With recent changes in nature due to global warming and human’s activities, it will be both challenging and exciting to observe and study animals in their habitat during summer, when their daily activities are higher than in other season. Another part of the field trip will involve patrol to find turtles’ eggs which needs to be saved since the period of the program overlaps with the peak of mating season of turtles.

The topic of Safari Summer Program consists of learning the basic concept of exotic animals, wildlife medicine, marine wildlife, oceanography, and recent development in Indonesia’s safari condition. The studies are conducted through various methods including classes and field trips.
